Socrates, the great Greek philosopher tried hard to control his temper. He believed that an angry man was more of a beast than a human being. He had a wife, who used to lose her temper on the small excuse and tried her best to irritate the cool and calm philosopher. One day the woman became more furious than ever and began to insult Socrates. Socrates did not utter a single word and left her alone. He sat on the door-step of the house looking out on the public street. The wife finding that Socrates was not paying the least heed up to her loud and angry scolding, went up to him and emptied a potfull of water over him. The passers-by in the street were much pleased at the incident. Socrates joined with them in their laughter and quietly remarked, "I was expecting this, because after thunder comes the rain."

Questions :
